SUNSHINE IN PICTURE.

"Country Children" Painted Capitally by a Man From Chicago.

Sunshine gleams from the pictures of "Country Children," painted by Adam Emory Albright. All the brightness and cheer of a country sunrise is in the background of many of these pictures, and in the foreground one sees delightful children, all aglow and alive with the joy of living.

Mr. Albright's collection of pictures is to be seen at the Hoffman Gallery, Eighth and Locust streets. His pictures, numbering thirty, were on exhibition at the Art Institute of Chicago in October. Now that he has come to St. Louis his collection is bought them. Two went to Boston, two to New York and one to Montreal.

These paintings are new. They are distinctively and positively American. Nothing like them had ever been seen in St. Louis or anywhere else until recently. The artist has gone out into the woods and fields and imprisoned on canvas the very spirit of young morning and young life. Joy comes to the eyes and to the heart at sight of these country children raking hay, digging worms for bait, going down the river road with their home-grown fishing poles, cut from some convenient tree or bush.

These fishing poles are not the straight, lime-city-sold affairs with which we are familiar. They are the American boy's own, crooked, now too long, and with a whitened glove at the end around which the line is tied. If you have ever lived in the country and got up early when the fish bite well and gone fishing you will appreciate what this means. The grass and weeds are shining with dew, the air is fresh, and over yonder where the line of sky joins with the earth there is that gentle lavender haze over the trees and meadows. All around the yellow sunshine, yellow and mellow than the glare of midday. All these things are told in Mr. Albright's canvases. We are a little homesick for the joys we knew as children as we look, but we're glad we have such bright memories of the past and such bright pictures in the present.

These pictures were not all painted in the morning light. Some of them are quite familiar to those lazy ones who may abide until the sun is hours high and the magic of early morning is gone. Not for them are the purples and pinks and lavenders and yellows in the distant horizon. Perhaps the dreary November weather after such a succession of glorious autumn days has something to do with one's joy in these glimpses of fields and forests bright with sunshine.

Having had our little rapture over these dear country scenes, let us consider the boys and girls who make the picture. The landscape is but a background for their vigorous young bodies, alive from tip to toe with action. These pictures mean something. They speak to children and to children of a larger growth.

Late River News.

Calno, Ill., Nov. 12.—The river fell 2 of a foot during the last twenty-four hours. The gauge reads 11.5 feet. The weather is fair, cool and windy, with indications favorable for rain. The H. H. Clark cleared for New Orleans at 11:30 p. m., with 5 loaded barges. The G. M. Steely left for St. Louis, with 5 barges, arrived at 5 p. m. Pilot A. W. Miller brought her out; she left here for Arkansas City to-morrow morning. The Rose Lee arrived from St. Louis with a fair trip at 7 p. m.; she discharged a lot of sundries, made her usual additions and departed for Memphis at 9 p. m. The Longfellow and Dolphin are due to-night.

The Verne Mack departed for Memphis last night. The barge will leave for St. Louis to-morrow morning.

MEET IN DIFFERENT CITIES.

Knights of Labor Factions in Session at Two Points.

Washington, Nov. 17.—John M. Parsons presided to-day over a meeting here of the Parsons wing of the Knights of Labor, adjourned over from the recent convention at Birmingham, Ala. About thirty delegates attended. The meeting was devoted to a review of the controversy between the Parsons and Hayes factions. Mr. Parsons explained in detail the litigation pending to compel former Secretary-Treasurer Hayes to turn over the books and other property of the order that were kept by him. The counsel of the order here assisted in explaining the nature of the legal proceedings, the next step in which will be a hearing before Justice Barnard in this city the latter part of this month.

HAYES FACTION SESSION.

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 17.—
